FREE LECTURES

Activism in the Capital City

at the Sacramento Public Library- Tsakopoulos Library Galleria

11:30 with ANDREW McLEOD

Recognizing the importance of preserved archival documents, Historian Andrew McLeod discusses early Sacramento as a hotbed for activism, providing a greater context for the “Squatters’ Riot” uprising and the persistent struggle for the city’s land that would continue through the 1860s.

1:00 with WILLIAM BURG

Historian William Burg tells the story of “The Criminal Syndicalism Trial of 1935” and the Sacramento District Attorney’s attempt to prosecute eighteen members of the Cannery and Agricultural Workers Union (CAWIU) for their involvement with the Communist Party.

2:30 with JAMES SCOTT

Librarian James Scott describes Sacramento as a hub of activism during the Vietnam War-- a conflict that claimed the lives of nearly 200 Sacramento County servicemen. Frequent protests at Sacramento State College highlighted an era of dissent quite unlike any other in the Capital City’s history.
